SENDING OUR PRAYERS AND THOUGHTS TO EVERYONE AFFECTED BY THIS TRAGEDY

North America No Longer Safe From Terrorist Attacks

by Hugh Panelas & Mat Thompson*

Tuesday, September 11, 2001 will be a day long remembered in the minds of citizens of not only the United States of America, but the world. In an apparently coordinated terrorist attack against the United States, four commercial passenger jets crashed on Tuesday, three of them into significant landmarks. As of press time this is all the information that Lambda has been able to gather.

Five large commercial planes were hijacked from airports across the United States, from such cities as Boston, Newark and Pittsburgh. What we do know is that two of these planes have crashed into the two towers of the World Trade Center and a third crashed into a section of the Pentagon.

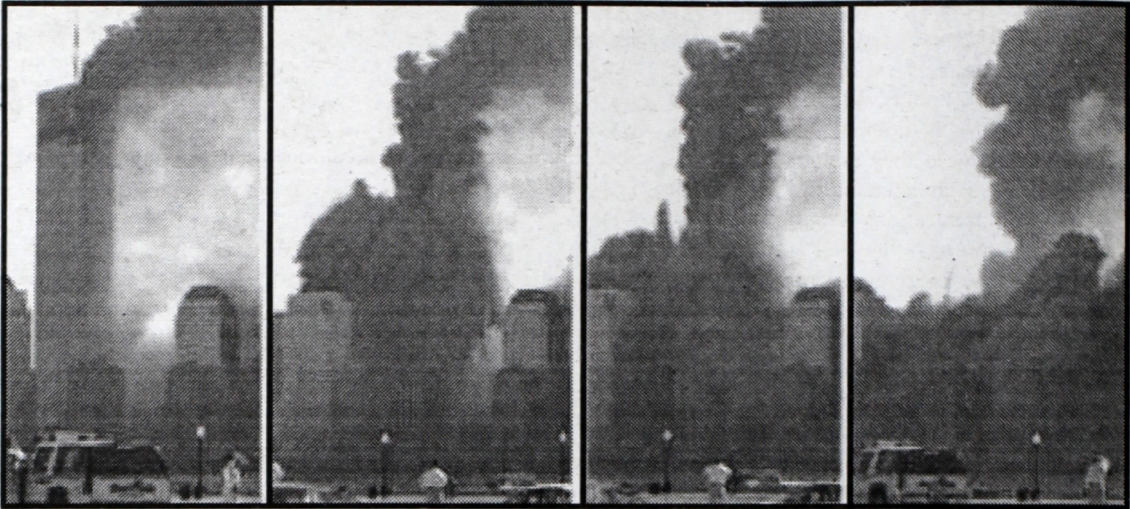

American Airlines Flight 11, carrying 81 passengers and 11 crew members, slammed into the north tower of the World Trade Center in Manhattan shortly before 9 a.m. About 15 minutes later, United Airlines Flight 175 from Boston to Los Angeles, with 56 passengers and nine crew members on board, crashed into the south tower. Both towers eventually collapsed in a shower of debris and plume of thick dust. Firefighters could get no closer than 2 blocks from the burning hulk.

A half-hour after the second crash, American Flight 77 took off from Washington, D.C.'s Dulles Airport en route to San Francisco, carrying 58 passengers and six crew members — but crashed into the Pentagon instead. Less than an hour after the third crash, United Flight 93 en route from Newark, New Jersey, to San Francisco, California, crashed near Shanksville, Pennsylvania, with 38 passengers and seven crew aboard.

One of the Last shots of both World Trade Towers Before Their Eventual Collapse

A Horrific Timeline of the collapse of the Second World Trade Centre Tower

U.S. intelligence officials stated "there are good indications that persons linked to Osama bin Laden may be responsible for these attacks." The sources say they based the statement on specific information that had been gathered Tuesday. Bin Laden is the Saudi millionaire who has been blamed for terror attacks against U.S. interests and is believed to be in Afghanistan.

All 24 000 Pentagon employees were evacuated and once again as of press time there has been no casualties reported. A 60-foot section of the Pentagon was wiped out as one of the planes deliberately crashed into the side of the building and ended up coming to a stop in the courtyard. However, the damage to the Pentagon seems almost insignificant to the destruction in New York.

The World Trade Center has an average visitor attendance of 150 000 people per day and holds in access of 50 000 employees. Despite rescue teams best attempts, both towers collapsed from what appears to be the structural damage. Manhattan was left in a cloud of dust as the two towers came crashing to the ground, people were left running for safety in each and every direction.

No official number of injured or fatalities has been reported as of Lambda's press time, but one can only imagine how high those numbers are going to be. This will certainly go down in history as one of the biggest tragedies in North American history. Not since Pearl Harbor has American soil seen such an attack. However this does differ from Pearl Harbor as it was a government sanctioned military attack and Tuesday's attack appears to be an act of terrorism. This makes the situation more complicated because the question of "who?" comes to mind. Also, this attack wasn't initiated on a specific military institution, the World Trade Center is a civilian workplace.

President Bush called the crashes "a national tragedy." Later in the day, Bush issued a statement from Barksdale AFB near Shreveport, Louisiana. "Make no mistake: The United States will hunt down and punish those responsible for these cowardly acts."

The United States Secret Service secured President Bush, Vice President Cheney, Speaker of the House Dennis Hastert and key members of Bush's Cabinet and national security team. Air Force One landed in Omaha, Nebraska, and spokeswoman Karen Hughes says Bush is in a secure location.

Three Palestinian groups — Hamas, the Democratic Front for the Liberation of Palestine and Islamic Jihad — deny responsibility for the attacks, but blame U.S. policies in the Mideast.

For the first time in history the United States has shut down all airports. No flights will be leaving or arriving for the next couple of days. Any planes that were in the air at the time of the attacks have been re-directed to Canada. Canada has also shut down its airports in order to accommodate the overflow from the U.S.A. US Transportation Secretary Norman Mineta ordered FAA to suspend operation of all flights until at least noon Wednesday. He also issued orders controlling the movements of all vessels in U.S. waters.

The United States has dispatched their delta-wing fighters in order to patrol the skies above both Manhattan and the Pentagon in order to protect them from any further developments. All major tourist sites such as the Sears Tower in Chicago, the United Nations in New York, the White House and Disneyland have all been shut down in order to keep the public safe from anything else that could happen.

Tuesday, September 11, 2001 will be on the minds of all of us for the rest of our lives. We will all remember where we were years from now when looking back on what has happened. Lambda would like to send its best wishes to the families, friends and everyone else out there that this tragedy touches. In some ways it has hit us all because it happened in our own back yard.

Huntington University and Union of Ontario Indians Join Forces on Media Issues

LU Press Release

Huntington University and the Union of Ontario Indians are working together to help improve media coverage of Aboriginal issues and investigate ways of building communications capacity in First Nations communities.

Huntington University and the North Bay-based political representative of 43 First Nations in Ontario today announced they are co-operating on the establishment of a Centre for Communications Excellence. The Centre, to be located at Huntington on the Laurentian University campus, will promote research on how Aboriginal people are portrayed in the media, a concern raised by the Royal Commission on Aboriginal Peoples. It will also encourage Aboriginal youth to become involved in the field of media and to pursue their studies in this area. Both Huntington University and the Union of Ontario Indians expect that this collaboration will lead to the establishment of scholarships and awards to encourage a greater number of Aboriginal people to pursue media careers.

On September 10, students from Laurentian University and Cambrian College will begin their first courses in Huntington's new communications program, which will include a course entitled "The Aboriginal Beat" which deals with media treatment of Aboriginal issues. The course content was developed around themes that emerged from a March 3, 2001 conference hosted by Huntington University and the Union of Ontario Indians entitled "The Aboriginal Beat: building bridges between First Nation communities and mainstream media."

The conference's final report, comprised of a 56-page booklet and accompanying 22-minute video, was released at today's news conference. The report's recommendations called for journalists and educators to become engaged in increasing public awareness and understanding of aboriginal cultures, traditions, and contemporary issues.

The Aboriginal Beat Conference brought together educators and journalists, as well as Aboriginal leaders to examine the role of mainstream media in providing accurate information about such controversial topics as hunting and fishing rights, and discussed media stereotyping of Aboriginal people. Both the final report and video of the Aboriginal Beat Conference are designed to be valuable teaching resources, as well as professional development tools for media organizations. Copies are being provided to educators, journalists, and Aboriginal groups and organizations across Canada.

EDITOR'S CORNER

This Little Piggy Had a Paper...

by Mat Thompson
Editor In Chief

Welcome back... welcome to... welcome in general to everyone to year six in The Wrath of Mat. That's right, this is actually year six that I have been working for, editing and running this fine newspaper for Laurentian. I sat up for the last couple of nights trying to figure out a way to greet everyone back in a nice friendly Editorial way, then it hit me... I have done that to death. Do we need writers? Yes. Do I need help at the paper? Yes. How do I explain everything I need to say in this editorial without offending anyone in particular? Here goes...

This little piggy went to market,
This little piggy stayed home,
This little piggy had roast beef,
This little piggy had none,
and this little piggy cried wee, wee,
wee all the way home.

Have I gone insane? Hell no, that happened years ago when I accepted the position of Editor In Chief for Lambda. Actually this poem (as so elegantly pointed out by Dr. Hoi Chu) holds within it the entire meaning of this newspaper and exactly how I feel people should look at the paper.

Go back for a second and look at the poem and see what you find the meaning to be (refer to the piggy poem above). As Hoi (I call him that because I can) pointed out the meaning behind this poem is not anything so dire as class structure, social anarchy, or even the degradation and impoverishing vices that hold individuals down while others thrive in a society filled with markets and roast beef and little piggies. The meaning of the poem is just fun. There is no real meaning to the poem when you tell it to a 2 year old and you play with their little toes (or fingers as we learned... smile). The poem is there to entertain, teach and inform on a level that is of interest to the parties involved (the piggie and the piggier).

So what the hell does this have to do with Lambda? Well, if you haven't figured it out, this paper is here to do the same thing as that poem. We are here to entertain, inform and teach to different people on different levels. We are not here to change the world, but we will stick our opinions in when it is deemed necessary and we will act like total fools in a nonsensical manner when we need to too.

The poem is what you make of it, but if you read too far into something that was intended for a simple reason like entertainment, then you are totally missing the point. Many people wrote this paper over the summer appalled by our content (or lack thereof), our apparent over-use of profanity, our low level of moral values, and even my supposed use of Lambda as my own propaganda for my own ideas, values and ethics.

Well, most of these letters will be printed in Lambda within the next few weeks so that the student body can decide if your views on Lambda and myself are valid, or just another part of the Darwinian principle.

If the writers of these letters could have stepped back a second and looked at Lambda for what it is, I really don't think they would have sent such harsh comments. All Lambda is all those little piggies rolled into one... and we still make no sense whatsoever. Look at us for what we have achieved up to this point, and what we will achieve this our 40th year of publication. Step up and get involved instead of complaining about what we do or don't do. Be positive in your contributions instead of negative in your attacks on the paper and myself. Its not like I ever said I was bigger than God... I just said it was a damn close race...

Lambda

Dear Lambda,

It has been bothering me for a while, but when I tried registering today, it was just too much. You know, there is this perfect labyrinth in this university. Chaotic, totally confusing and absolutely inconsistent. The officials refer to it as the "Universities new webpage". The old one was bad enough - at least you could find things, if you were looking for them long enough. But apparently, they fixed this problem. There is this new feature, online registration. It is really a very nice idea, but again, you have to try long enough to get it the right way. If you can find the starting page...

The login isn't any easier, the programmers of this site obviously haven't heard of non-case sensitive input and needed to spell the login name different than any other computer services related source. The registering procedure isn't actually that bad, if you are not trying to register for a winter course whose prerequisites are to be taken in the fall. That of course needs a second course adding attempt. I think the only function of that registration site that I found working correctly was the logout button, but I wouldn't be all that sure if it really did log me out internally.

But hey, what am I complaining about, after all the whole thing was approved by the administration.

Felix Hanke

Editor's Note: Just wait, admin has approved an on-line dating service for on and off campus students to begin this fall. They have had a few glitches so far, but they finally ironed them all out by cutting another sports team...

Looking Forward to a Great Year...

Hello everyone and welcome back to Laurentian for another great year! For those of you who are new to Laurentian, I hope you enjoyed your Frosh experience during the first week of September. As the President of the SGA I'm looking forward to a great year filled with fun activities, concerts and events planned by the SGA's VP Services Nicole Walker; as well as involvement in action against the Harris government and much political activism as planned by our VP Student Issues, Suzanne Legault. Thanks especially to Nicole for running a great Frosh Week, and for everyone that helped out. Our thanks to you.

As SGA students, you are part of a great association that puts students first, and thrives on student activities. The SGA provides many services for students, such as the Health Plan, but remember that the last day to opt out of the plan is September 28, 2001. Don't forget about Rick Bronson in the Pub on September 21, 2001! Keep your eyes open as most Pub activities are posted around campus, as well as all activities put on by the SGA.

We're looking forward to a great year, and hopefully everyone, from off-campus students to rez kids to faculty and administration will enjoy themselves in 2001/2002. If you have any questions, suggestions or just want to drop by the office, we are located in the Student Centre between the Games Room and the Clubs Room, or check us out at our website, www.sga.laurentian.ca

Collateral Damage

by Kazak@dustybud.com
contributor

I awoke to the foul stench of death this morning. Not the kind of sick smell from someone who has been dead for hours or even days. No this was the smell of a fresh corpse.

I nervously crawled from my bed to try and find any evidence of this crime all the time plotting my escape from the authorities. A room to room search and a quick look at my hands told me that this time the blood was not on my hands.

I knew something was going on. That smell of death made me decide against food or drink. I had to find the source. Perhaps the television could offer a valuable clue.

Today was a good day not to be in the grips of a terrible hangover. The news itself provided the dizziness and sickness any highpriced hangover could provide. Thousands of people died only moments before by a suicide bomber.

I couldn't help but be in awe of the scene before me. I felt a bit like Obi-Wan Kenobi, somehow sensing the destruction, somehow hearing their tiny little voices screaming in terror and then being suddenly silenced.

I spent the morning watching the carnage at the university. The repetitive nature of the news broadcast allowed me to slip into the realm of trying to understand the situation.

So this is what they call collateral damage. Funny I haven't heard that term yet this morning. I certainly flew around the news quite liberally when the Americans were attempting to eliminate the Middle East threat. I see no difference in the battle going on today.

Only a true psychopath feels no remorse or no emotion to events like these. My initial reaction assured me I was not yet entirely a psychopath, but as the day shuffled along my emotions slowly shut down.

The true horror of this, to me, was that to American authorities the culprit was unclear because there are so many different organizations who would like to claim responsibility. How can this be? Has the USA gotten so out of control that this type of action is inevitable and perhaps necessary? This to me is a crime in itself. I think that grim reality makes this harder to bear for the average semi educated US citizen. By allowing its own government to piss off every Arab east of Lisbon it has made every god fearing American citizen a target, and not until they eliminate each and every enemy they may have will they be free from attack. Thomas Hobbes would be proud.

What's next? Where does this leave me? Do we blow the dust off the fallout shelter in our backyards? Has the threat of global annihilation reared its ugly head? One thing is for certain, nobody can bloody the nose of a bully and expect no reaction.

As I watch the same pictures over and over in the news, morning grows into afternoon, and I begin to wonder when George W plans to seek revenge. Hell, maybe it's time to flatten the Middle East. Eliminate that problem we created over fifty years ago. I can bet you one thing, Bub, when the hammer falls across the ocean many bloodthirsty Americans will forget the pain of their suffering and applaud the deaths of many Arab citizens some of who could easily be mistaken for their mothers, daughters or sons under different conditions.

We all hold some responsibility for this calamity. The harder I look the more I see blood on my hands. I worked so hard to scrub it off, I have forgotten how it got there. I think our ignorance put it there. I wanted to believe the west was right so I didn't take the time to do my research and now it is too late. A bleeding heart is now expendable. The bloodthirsty warhawks are in control of the game now. It appears we are all doomed, but hell, God bless America right

George W Bush is on now. I cannot bear to look into the eyes of the man who may very soon be responsible for my death. I shall go to the one safe haven I that know.....the bar

From the Front Lines

by Steve Kraus
contributor

Have you ever wondered what's going on beyond your front door? Have you ever wondered why most injustices go unheard? Do you realize that your future is being stolen from you? Do you realize that one person can make a difference?

Well ladies and gentlemen if these questions seem revolutionary in origin, then you've got my message so far. I am a second year English Major, with a minor in Political Science. I profoundly support the activities of the political left and the principles of social change. What I hope to achieve in my column is to enlighten, and awaken Lambda readers so that more individuals will be aware of issues on the home front and the global stage. Pressing issues must never be ignored. As the resident voice of the voiceless, I want to bring you all to the seventh level, cause you to take action, not be pacified by "a system that believes in the status quo".

What is going on beyond your front door? The Coalition of Immokalee Workers needs your help to make Taco Bell a part of the solution in Florida's farm workers fight for dialogue and a fair wage!

These days fast food seems to be everyone's favorite dining option. Were you aware that perhaps your personal favorite: Taco Bell is responsible for the continuation of a two-century-old injustice? Tricon Global Restaurants, Inc the multinational that owns Taco Bell, Kentucky Fried Chicken and Pizza Hut to name a few large franchises is alienating the farmers and cultivators that provide them with the means to serve you your favorite taco, burrito or fajita. The Tricon Fast Food Empire is encouraging the supply of produce at inequitable rates and in sweatshop conditions putting profiteering above their contracted farm workers' well being and health. Tomato producers claim that they have no health insurance, no vacation time, no sick leave, no pension, a two-decade-old pricing rate freeze and unfair wages.

These are issues of fundamental importance and necessity for any worker devoting his life to agarian production. For the efforts put forth by these labourers day in and day out, we cannot simply sit by and watch as their needs are neglected in favour of the corporate bottom line.

"If Taco Bell were to voluntarily pay just one cent more per pound, and the growers would agree to pass that penny along to the picker, that one penny could almost double the picking piece rate overnight". Taco Bell Inc. has the power to effect change and improve the lives of those who keep their machine running. If they would use that power and influence to help the labour force that ensures their corporate survival then we wouldn't be forced to shut them down

"According to the Agricultural Industry Journal, Taco Bell is a major client of the Immokalee based Six L's Packing Co, one of the biggest tomato producers in the United States. Indeed, fresh tomatoes are a featured component of many of Taco Bell's best-selling products".

With no tomatoes on the menu Taco Bell begins to lose flavour. With no hope and no future, the workers lose their favour. Let Taco Bell know you don't approve of their practices. Say it in person next time you are at the New Sudbun Center or, say in writing! Here's where write: Mr. Emil J. Brolick, President and Chief Concept Officer, Taco Bell Corp. 17901 VonKarman, Irvine, California 92614

The Sacrificial Dogs of War

by Kazak@dustybud.com
contributor

The Ghouls were out in full force in late August. I saw their pictures in the paper. Their hollow stares reminded me of the walking dead I had encountered many times before. What frightened me this time was their boldness. Never before had the ghouls been brave enough to show their oily hides in broad daylight carrying signs to swear their allegiance to a much more sinister plot.

As I examined the picture I realized that I too had nearly become one of the walking dead. Earlier that day a man, who I failed to recognize as one of the ghouls but had made me cringe in panic nonetheless, had tried to recruit me to the ranks of his lifeless army. He told me that the government, more specifically the head demon Mike Harris, had "committed an act of negligence which resulted in the death of Kimberly Rogers". Curse these ghouls and their fancy forked tongues. For a second I almost joined the cause. I almost became one of the mislead, one of the ghouls.

Don't misunderstand me, I am not a fan of the dark prince of the tories, but good God man I can smell trouble a mile away, even over the smell of rotting flesh.

To rid myself of the messenger of the dead I mumbled something about responsibilities and not having my speech prepared. Thank heavens I confused him enough that he wrote me off as a potentially weak leak or perhaps even loose cannon.....who knows....who cares....I was just glad he left. The rest of the day I was tormented by images of the events taking place outside my door. The march seemed to be some sick and twisted dance of self pity and stupidity. Who were these people? Where did they come from? For all I knew they were immigrants taken from the boat and handed signs and told the American dream started with a march.

Even as I watched it, I knew the truth. These people had no idea they were in the midst of a war. Poor bastards. The battle had been lost. Kim Rogers was dead, another name to add to the list of casualties. No amount of marching was going to change the outcome of that battle, and no amount of marching would bring a tear to the eye of the prince of darkness, Mike Harris. My real fear was the ghouls. What would happen if the hammer came down? They would flee like rats from a sinking ship they would drop their signs and thank the prince of darkness for his mercy. These ghouls had no idea what they were protesting, they are unaware of the greater battle that is being fought by hundreds of Kim Rogers across the province everyday. If they really cared they would still be marching for these peoples lives, not their deaths. That is what makes them ghouls, they reveal in the death of their own. They smell rotting flesh and use it as a beacon to bring them together for the feast. One day they may be lucky enough to die such a dishonourable death that the ghouls might try to recruit me again.

Perhaps, one day, they will discover the roots of the war and take up that cause instead of feeding on the flesh of the victims of battles that have already been lost. Then a death like that of Kim Rogers will be a more meaningful sacrifice, instead of just another number and another lost cause.

Get in the Ring

by Bryson McCarthy
columnist

Okay. Lets just put all our card on the table right now. I am back once again to make people think about things in a whole new way. You may think you know me, but you don't know a thing because knowing me does not mean that you understand me or what I am in any way. I make people talk. I force you to think for yourself instead of listening to groups of left and right wingers telling you who is evil and who is good. Go as far to one side as you want and there will always be someone like me right in the middle smacking you with a shot of reality.

Now on to the good stuff. Terrorist attacks on the US. The whole thing has unfolded like a well written novel. An ordinary day in the lives of every American until the unthinkable happens; four planes are hijacked and three are crashed into major government structures killing thousands and injuring even more. The gun toting monkey that is the President starts pointing fingers at everyone who is not a true-blue American and threatens to basically bomb the world if the culprits are not giving up. One of the lead terrorists in the world is blamed but he claims to have no involvement in the destruction, but the US does not care; they are going after him anyway.

So what is missing from this story of destruction, murder, international terrorism and mayhem? The twist ending. I am going to lay it all on the line right now and say that I would not be surprised if it was a group of Americans that pulled this off. Maybe they were landed immigrants or maybe they are just as True Blue as the Bush-inator himself, but I can see this entire thing (once again) blowing up in the Americans faces.

Right away they went on the defensive stating that they would bomb any country that had anything to do with this. So what are they going to do when they find out that it was just a little psychopath like Timothy McVey, or the (God forbid I mention this again) children that ran wild in Columbine highschool. America is not so damn perfect and I hope that they will realize that now.

Now don't go all insane on me saying that I don't feel anything for the people in this tragedy. This has to be one of the worst things I have ever witnessed in my life. People at work either killed by a plane, falling building or even jumping to their own deaths. Firemen, police and other rescue workers killed in the collapse and innocent travelers who were used as part of a huge flying bomb to kill thousands of others.

George Bush claimed that the terrorists could not break the foundation of what America truly is. What I see the terrorists did was kill thousands people, something George W. had better understand is the true backbone of America. America is only an idea and a land mass. The true solid foundation is not their unity, or their will to overcome, but the people. Good old George seemed to forget that when he basically stated that sure, you can kill as many of us as you want, but we will still salute our flag because it is the most important thing to us, he literally ignored that these workers were the foundation.

What should be the most important thing is not to hunt down and destroy whoever did this. Use all your resources to find these people, American or not, and bring them to justice. An eye for an eye does not seem right in this situation. Well, yes and no. Here's my idea...

You find the person or person's responsible for this act and bring them to trial. There is no way in hell that they will ever be acquitted, so as part of their punishment you have every person who was affected by this tragedy visit them in jail and tell them who they killed and how they ruined the lives of thousands. This will take years and will easily break the criminals down. Then after the last mother and little sister come in to tell them how they lost little Johnny on the attack, then you bring them to true justice.

They will have been easily broken down mentally over the years of heart wrenching tales of loss, so all you have to do is physically end their miserable existences. But the way to do it is televised on CNN. Show the world that something like this is not going to be accepted anymore. Don't gas or electrocute them or even put them in front of a firing squad. Torture them on live television proving that you can do far worse than a plane into a building. Torture them, chop them up Iron Chef style and send the pieces to every head of state in every country that seems have a problem with the US and Canada (we are a part of this whether we like it or not). Make key chains out to the parts and send a Thank You letter if you want. Fk with their heads not their country.

Back to the American thing again. I truly believe that there is a chance that this happened by Americans on American soil. It is just a gut feeling, but one I will not ignore. Hopefully the US will look at all aspects of this and all angles instead of focusing on one terrorist in a world full of billions of people that probably have some sort of problem with America and their constant involvement and bullying tactics all the while creating a globalized community that they feel is perfect.

I feel for the victims, the survivors and the families of both. This is the worst thing that could have ever happened and I wish, as many do, that it never did happen. America and George W had just better watch what they say and how they say it until the entire truth comes out. I just hope it doesn't end up biting them in the ass because as Canadians we always feel the after effects of that bite!

Arts & Entertainment

Attention EVERYONE!!!

Here's the deal, I'm going to get straight to the point and drive home the message. We at Lambda need writers and badly. I can't begin to stress who badly we need your help. I'm sure all of you out there will grow tired of reading my same old articles week after week and eventually this section will become stale. That's where you come in.

In order to make Lambda as successful as it has been in the past I need you, the students to come in with story ideas, articles and anything and everything that you'd like to see and read. Need some ideas? This is what I am looking in particular:

Advice columnist: We need to have one. Are you the person that gets stuck dealing with all of those crying people after a night of boozing at the Pub? Maybe your advice can reach more people if you put it in writing.

Internet Guru: Another absolute. With millions and millions of websites out there one can get lost and not be able to find the most useful and interesting websites. I'm looking for someone that has the time and the desire to search the web and tell the students about fun websites that are worth wild visiting, one catch though, it must be appropriate, no adult content.

Horoscopes: Are you psychic? Do you have the ability to read the stars? If so I need you! Everyone loves picking up a paper and reading what fate has in store for them on any given particular day.

These are just some ideas of what you can do for Lambda. If you have ANYTHING that you want to do for the Arts and Entertainment section please swing by the office and talk to me. I really would like your help this year in making the section a success. No matter how far out the idea is, suggest it, the crazier the better. Hope to see you soon...what?

The Age Old Question

See how your friends' schools rank in the Light Bulb test...

How Many Cambrian Collage Students does it take to change a lightbulb?

- Only one, but they get a master's degree

How many Lakehead students does it take to change a lightbulb?

- None, Thunder Bay doesn't have electricity yet.

How many U of T students does it take to change a lightbulb?

- Two, one to change the bulb and one to crack under the pressure.

How many Queens students does it take to change a lightbulb?

- One, he holds the bulb and the world revolves around him or her.

How many Waterloo students does it take to change a lightbulb?

- Five, one to design the nuclear powered bulb that will never burn out, one to figure out how to power the whole university with that bulb, two to install it and one to write the program that will control the switch on the wall.

How many Trent students does it take to change a lightbulb?

- Eleven, one to screw it in and ten to support the bulb's sexual orientation.

How many Western students does it take to change a lightbulb?

- Five, one to change the bulb and four to find the perfect Hilfiger outfit to wear for the occasion.

How many McMaster students does it take to change a lightbulb?

- Two, one to change the bulb and another to proclaim that they did it as well as a Queens student.

How many Carleton students does it take to change a lightbulb?

- Two, one to change the bulb and the other to complain about how if they were at a better school the lights wouldn't burn out.

How many McGill students does it take to change a lightbulb?

- One, but they can't do it on a Friday or Saturday night.

How many Brock students does it take to change a lightbulb?

- Seven, one to change the bulb and six to throw a party because they didn't screw it in upside-down this time.

How many York students does it take to change a lightbulb?

- Only one, but they need an instruction manual.

How many RMC students does it take to change a lightbulb?

- None, when it gets dark the fire flares or put on their nightscopes.

How many UBC students does it take to change a lightbulb?

- Twelve, three to draw up the plan of attack, two to rally the student support, one to change the bulb and the other six to draw the pepperspray fire away from the cause!

and last but not least...

How many Laurentian University students does it take to change a lightbulb?

- None, LU students do it in the dark.

Horror Movie of the Week

Hugh Panelas
Staff Writer

Yes it is true. After 2 years of pestering everyone I know to sit down and watch girls screaming, killers stalking and fake blood oozing across the screen, I am finally in a position to sell nothing but cheesy, make you want to puke horror flicks. Each week I will dive deep into my collection and recommend a movie that I think will have you in screams of pain from laughter or fright; your choice. First up, Crocodile.

I know what all of you out there must be thinking; 'wasn't Lake Placid bad enough?' Believe me it has nothing on Crocodile, which if you can believe it, is nothing more than an even lower budget version of Lake Placid. Here's the basic plot:

A group of friends on spring break decide to rent a houseboat and float down the river, drinking and partying. Sounds like any other university student's idea of a good time right? Well when you add in the fact that there is an old hotel that used to be the home of a crocodile-worshipping cult you have problems. The best part is the cult worships the West Nile crocodile, and there just happens to be one lurking in the marshes in the good old USA. Now people, what do you do when you find a nest of giant eggs and you aren't sure where they come from? Of course, you pick them up and carry them with you. Make sure you piss off the 20-foot mommy crocodile too.

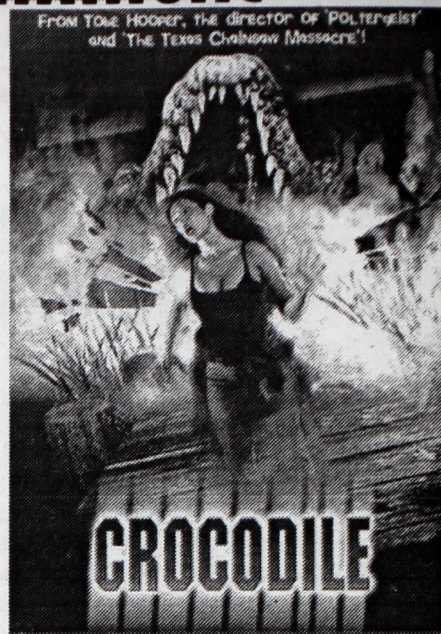

The movie stars Mark

McLauchlin, Caitlin Martin and Chris Solari. Don't worry, I have never heard of either of them either. In all honesty though, the cast does all fit and work well together. They actually make the entire story somewhat believable... well at least they all act like a real group of drunken university students. The movie even comes complete with redneck locals and of course the best damn looking paper machete crocodile ever. The way that it floats across the water will have you falling out of your seats.

As for the special effects, well, I think they hired someone's kid brother to do the graphics because the crocodile's feet never really touch the ground when it's walking on the shores of the river. Then again I'm surprised I didn't see a guy holding a picture of the animal or someone dressed in a costume. It's also amazing how a houseboat that looks like 4 cardboard walls taped to a paddleboat can have a nice interior, complete with different rooms. Who would have ever guessed it?

What did really impress me throughout the movie was the character's dialogue. This is a rare type of movie to find. The people in this movie actually talk like university students should. They come across as being very real and there aren't too many cheesy one-liners. Who am I kidding? This entire movie is nothing more than a brick of stinking cheese, but hell. When you are in Trenton, Ontario and you go into a movie store and see a rip-off of Lake Placid for only $7.99 who can resist? Exactly. I couldn't and you should really see this movie. I guarantee you'll laugh, cry and maybe even throw something at the TV to make it stop. If you have 90 minutes to spare, find this movie, it's worth it.

On another note Tobe Hooper, famous for The Texas Chainsaw Massacre, directs it. In all honesty, that's what made me buy this movie.

That's all for this week. Up next, the lizard thriller Komodo.

Twisted Joke of the Week

A young man stopped his car by the side of the road, tuned to the girl in the passenger seat and made the usual advances. After a while of messing around, the girl stopped the guy and said, "I hate to tell you this but I am actually a hooker. If you want to go any further the cost is going to be $30."

The young man thought about it for a minute then pulled out his wallet and gave the girl the thirty buck. The two had sex in the backseat of the car for a few minutes, then afterwards they climbed into the front seat again.

After a minute or two the girl asked "Why aren't we going anywhere? Do you want more?"

"No," the guy explained. "I hate to tell you this, but I'm really a cab driver and the fare back to two is $40."

On their wedding anniversary, the redneck's wife asked her equally redneck husband,

"Homer, should I kill a chicken for tonight?"

He thought about it for a while then replied, "Nah, why blame a chicken for something that happened twenty years ago."

Who Better Than Me?...NOBODY!!!

by Hugh Panelas
staff writer

After a long summer the wrestling world has finally settled into what we might call a temporary comfort zone. All of us fans got to see everything that we have ever hoped and dreamed for and it all has taken place over the last 4 months, the duration of our summer break.

I must say, to steal a quote from HHH, "I am that damn good". I believe it was I that reported earlier in the year that Vince McMahon would in fact purchase both the E.C.W. and W.C.W. and that he would merge all three companies into one. I knew that we would all get to see our favorites from each federation finally get into the same ring. You did hear it here first and for that I must take a bow.

Seriously though, what an amazing summer it was. It all began with E.C.W. re-forming within the ranks of the W.W.F. I almost flew off the couch when the entire squad turned and attacked Jericho and Kane. What a sight indeed. It was also interesting to see that all of the E.C.W. wrestlers accepted Mike Awesome, to the point where Paul Heyman actually shook his hand. But as the old saying goes, business is business and if these guys want to remain on television they had to put their personal feelings aside. It was either that or join Brian Christopher and Jerry Lawler in the unemployment line.

What a job Vince has done this time around. Who isn't sitting on their couches on Monday and Thursday nights, absolutely glued to the tv, waiting to see just who will be coming in next, or who will win the other federation's championships. All of it has made this the dream summer for wrestling fans around the world and it can only get better.

Don't get me wrong though. I do have some issues with the whole merger. This can't all be fun and games. For starters, how could Vince McMahon be stupid enough to try to get W.C.W. its own time slot on TNN? Look at it this way, no one watched W.C.W. when Hogan, Sting, Macho Man, Goldberg, Luger and Flair were in the ring so who is going to watch it without them? Also the time slot that they are looking in getting is the Saturday night, 10-midnight slot. Yeah, because I am going to stay home from the bars to watch a watered down version of crappy wrestling. I just don't think anyone will care and it will go under faster than the XFL.

Another problem is the whole championship mess. Why are there so many damn belts? It's almost impossible to watch RAW and see a match where a guy doesn't have a belt. They should really look into unifying some of these titles. Do we really need two tag team champions or two light heavyweight champions? No, X-Pac is bad enough, although I have to admit I did cheer for him at RAW and SmackDown last week. Hey, I feel bad for the guy.

Personally I feel that they should just keep everyone on the roster that they want or need and unify all the titles. Go back to the old school days of wrestling, I mean this could be the first year that the W.W.F. could have 30 quality wrestlers in the Royal Rumble; I haven't seen that since 1990. It would also be nice to see some old school Survivor Series matches too. Am I the only one that misses the classic 4 on 4 battles?

Ok, this week I would like to conclude with a list of wrestlers that I feel have been great to watch since this whole merger began.

5. Lance Storm - although he received no reaction from the Canadian crowd at RAW and SmackDown last week in Toronto, he has quickly proved that he is where he belongs, after all, he is now a former Intercontinental Champion.

4. Kurt Angle - How can you not go insane for him now? The once annoying American Hero has become an unstable lunatic who just gets people laughing their asses off. However, it makes you wonder where Kurt would be if HHH wasn't hurt.

3. Rock - As much as I hate this guy I have to say that I am impressed with the way he has accepted his mid-card status. Sure he is the W.C.W. champion, but does anyone even care? He is selling moves now and has really found his niche.

2. Rob Van Dam - Everyone that knows me has to know that I really never was a fan of E.C.W., but in the little bit that I have seen I was amazed by Van Dam. I would say that within the next year you WILL see Van Dam with the W.W.F. title around his waist. I would compare him to an early Kurt Angle. Van Dam has all the high-flying and hardcore moves, but must develop the wrestling basics before he can move to the next level.

1. Booker T - I have always had hatred for the Bookerman but anyone that can make what the Rock says and does funny, I quickly gain respect for. Booker T has always been a Rock rip off but now that's his gimmick, and he's damn good at it. Who else could ever pull off the challenging Spinaroony? Exactly, no one.

That's all for this week people, any suggestions or questions feel free to call or swing by Lambda...what?
